

NNPS Recruiting Now: Special Education Teacher Residency Program

Newport News Public Schools is recruiting talented perspective Special Education teacher candidates for the Teacher in Residence Program. This program is in collaboration with Old Dominion University.

The Teacher in Residence Program requires a four- year commitment to Newport News Public Schools. Residents spend the first year learning how to teach alongside a highly-trained tenured teacher while earning a graduate degree. Residents who successfully complete the program receive priority hiring as a full-time salaried teacher in NNPS while continuing to receive professional support for their work. Residents commit to working as a full-time teacher with NNPS for the next three consecutive years.

NNPS Teacher Residents receive:

- Up to $20,000 in stipends during the residency year
- Tuition fees to be applied to a Master's degree
- Virginia teaching license after completing the one- year residency
